Scottish Allotments
and Gardens Society

Why should you join SAGS?

Allotments should be celebrated, recognised and respected - join us.

SAGS works tirelessly for allotment sites and plot holders throughout Scotland.

Allotments need

• Promotion

enjoy the health and good food;
celebrate our open air communities;
save the eco-system and enhance bio-diversity.

Allotments make a vital contribution to the health and well being of the community. Succour and improve the life of plot-holders and their families. With your help SAGS will continue its ground-breaking role of raising awareness of allotments throughout Scotland.

• Protection

save sites from developers;
safeguard allotments through new legislation;
secure plots from vandals.

Allotment sites are under threat. We need to work together. Share information and experiences and help provide a network of support and advice. See our web-site for continuing information on allotment sites and developments.

• Preservation

sustain skills in gardening and design;
support the on-going story of allotments;
conserve seeds and plants.

Gardening is becoming a lost art. Share your expertise to preserve the knowledge and skills. Sustain the planet by caring for our plants and land.

The National Society of Allotment and Leisure Gardeners.
“NSALG”.

The benefits, of membership of an Associated Society of about 100,000 like-minded men and women who have the future of allotment gardening at heart, are :-

A seed scheme run from a catalogue gives all members the chance to buy seeds from a national supplier at about 1/3 off normal shop prices.

An insurance scheme through which you can insure member's tool, sheds, or association property against specific risks.

Advice and access to free legal advice to resolve disputes.

A free glossy quarterly magazine to member societies, and, a selection of informative leaflets.
